F.]--[@ref-9]^ Thus, most studies have assessed the relationship of DHEAS with BMD, fractures, and osteoporosis by single-center and/or cross-sectional studies, and several studies have evaluated the association of DHEAS with BMD and/or fractures in the general population. In this study, the general population was assessed cross-sectionally and also followed up prospectively, which made it possible to reveal the relationship of serum DHEAS and hormone replacement therapy with BMD and fractures. Although it is known that oestrogen and testosterone are involved in the maintenance of calcium absorption and bone metabolism, the association of DHEAS and the risk of fractures was only a part of these associations. The results of this study suggest that serum DHEAS levels are related to bone metabolism and in particular to bone mass. Our results showed that in women with postmenopausal fractures, the serum levels of DHEAS and oestradiol were lower than in women without fractures, which suggests a relationship of DHEAS and the risk of fractures with decreasing oestrogen levels. Our findings were in agreement with the results of previous studies that investigated the association of serum DHE 3da54e8ca3
