ibn Abd Allah ibn Mansur

Ibrahim ibn Abd Allah ibn Mansur (1753- 1822 CE) was the amir al-ummah of the al-Afghani movement. He was a cousin of Jamal al-Din Muhammad ibn Abd Allah ibn Mansur (1751-1823 CE) who was the founder of the movement. He was the last of the four sons of Muhammad ibn Abd Allah ibn Mansur, who had been one of the most prominent figures of the movement during the early years of its establishment. The same family were also known for their role in the Delhi Sultanate and Akbar's Mughal Empire.

Founding of the Ghadar Party

When Jamal al-Din al-Afghani and most of his followers moved to India in 1884, Ibrahim ibn Abd

Allah ibn Mansur became the leader of the movement. When the Shaikh was arrested, the responsibility of the Ghadar Party was taken over by his second cousin Amin al-Din Muhammad-i-Qomi, better known as Nausheen-i-Ziyaar, who was the secretary general of the party. References

Transgender Health Resources

The National Center for

Transgender Equality says that in San Francisco, there are nearly a dozen doctors who specialize in transgender health, and just one clinic. How can people who are transgender have access to appropriate health care? A coalition of more than 10,000 doctors, nurses, allied health providers, mental health experts, social workers and activists are working together across the United States to help people of all gender
