It provides an alternative to the Col du Mont-Cenis for skiers travelling from the Pays de Savoie to Mont Blanc. Geography It rises from Chambéry-Vésubie (population: 2,334) at an altitude of near the ski resort of Chambéry. The tunnel forms part of the route of the Tour du Mont Blanc and leads to the Chablais Pass, the highest road pass in the Alps, at a height of . It is also connected to the Mont Blanc Tunnel and gives access from Chambéry to Chamonix.

Description The tunnel is located at the eastern end of the chain of the Vercors Massif, between the Côte Sauvage (Swiss border) and the Vigne Glacier (Mont-Blanc).

History Construction of the tunnel, which is enclosed by gabled tunnels on either side, began on 19 April 1977 and was finished in February 1980. It uses three partly inclined escalators to lift people from one side of the tunnel to the other, with the help of a wide conveyor belt that runs through the centre of the tunnel. The concept was developed by the French electric producer GEC Alsthom to provide access to the ski resort of Chambéry from Chamonix. Since the tunnel is shorter than the longest tunnel on the mountain route, it cuts nearly a half-hour off the journey time from Chamonix to Chambéry. Because of this, it
